Can tofu stop cancer?
Tofu is healthy
THE ONE FOOD THAT COULD SAVE YOUR LIFE
Tofu is a good source of protein in your diet

Low in saturated fat with no cholesterol, tofu is the primary source of protein for over a billion people every day. As more Americans recognize the benefits of eating soy, tofu is gaining popularity and with good reason.

Soybeans contain high levels of a unique type of phytoestrogen (a plant chemical) called isoflavones; researchers suggest genistein, the main isoflavone found in soy foods, helps to inhibit the growth of cancer cells and to reduce the risk of asteoporosis. In fact, current studies suggest that soy foods may play a significant role in lowering cholesterol levels; preventing many forms of cancer, heart disease and osteoporosis; and controlling diabetes. Recent research also indicates that soy foods, like tofu, help to minimize the unpleasant hot flashes of menopause.

Soy foods are rich in calcium, iron, zinc and many of the B vitamins. They're also high in fiber and cholesterol free. Soy protein decreases LDL ("bad") cholesterol and increases HDL ("good") cholesterol. In Asian countries, soy food consumption is linked to lower incidence of some cancer.

RECENTLY, Hunan Cafe, a tidy little storefront Chinese restaurant on the border between Nassau County and Queens in Floral Park, expanded its base about 50 percent Previously it must have been the size of a dinette.

The lengthy, varied menu includes preparations such as hot and sour soup, crispy fish, Buddha's delight and orange beef that have by now become standard fare. But some dishes, including a version of chicken soong prepared with shrimp, prawns in a glassy lime sauce are more unusual.

The cooking is generally reliable and if it manages to soar but occasionally, there are also relatively few dishes that disappoint. In short, this is a pleasant place with solidly good food, nice to have in the neighborhood and even worth traveling a bit to visit.

Start with the deeply glazed honey spareribs, the floppy Sichuan dumplings in a pungent sauce. Hunan Cafe serves a shrimp version of chicken soong, a gingery minced mixture to wrap in lettuce There is also a spicy chicken rendition called minced chicken in garlic sauce

One of the best soups in this or any other Chinese restaurant is the spicy seafood soup, a pale, translucent broth that is at once hotly spiced and tantalizingly sour and full of seafood and mushrooms. Some of the flavor of this soup should rub off on the one actually called hot and sour. Bean curd soup is similar to the hot and sour without pretensions of strong flavors, and with the addition of a little soy sauce it is mellow and soothing. Two of the best dishes in the house are the rich, satiny strips of eggplant family-style, assertively seasoned with chili and the succulent broad rice noodles called chow fun. The noodles are lightly seared to give them a hauntingly smoky edge and can be ordered with meat or seafood. They are excellent with shrimp.

Prawns with carrots and snow peas pods in lime sauce is a mild dish that has an appealing astringency. Shanghai shrimp in a smooth wine sauce, beef and chicken double delight in a brown sauce with vegetables and the crispy whole fish with lavish mincing of garlic, ginger and scallions in a spicy, ruddy sauce are some other fine choices

Most of the sauces are well-balanced and not overly starchy. For example, the Hunan beef is simply glossed with peppery oil The excellent spicy tangy chicken garnished with verdant broccoli is done in a similar manner But the Sichuan lobster, while hotly seasoned as expected, came in an unpleasantly gelatinous sauce.

The menu is riddled with symbols, including stars to indicate a hot dish, with one or two of them suggesting the degree of spice, and circles next to a listing to show the dishes that are medium to mild in flavor They are reasonably accurate A three-course dinner (appetizer, soup and main dishes) should average $15 a person, including tax and tip.

I Can't Seem To find the letter, but it came about a year ago from a woman in Central Islip or West Islip - one of the Islips, that much I know. The woman who wrote it was passionate in her recommendation of a little Floral Park Chinese restaurant, the Hunan Cafe, a place she considered worthy of an hour's drive. The food was wonderful, she said, but that wasn't the whole story. It was the warmth and friendliness of the owners that made all the difference to her.

It wasn't until recently that I got the opportunity to follow up on the letter. We were on our way home from a long weekend away; it was 2 in the afternoon, raining torrentially, and we hadn't had a bite since breakfast. "I'm not sure of the address, but let's try Hillside Avenue "

It was the first restaurant we saw - definitely a good omen. And a return trip corroborated the belief of the reader from the Islips that this was one of the most pleasant little Chinese restaurants on Long Island.

Not that you haven's seen the menu in a hundred other places. But I thought the wonton soup to be imbued with a little more flavor than any I'd had in awhile. And the hot and sour was so very full-bodied and zippy. I shared the chicken and corn chowder with a friend. We found it soothing, eggy and rich.

For an appetizer, you might want to start with the steamed vegetable dumplings, stuffed with a spunky, well-spiced blend of chopped vegetables. Scallion pancakes were crisp, oniony and comforting. My favorite starter, though, was the minced chicken in garlic sauce with lettuce, an assertive, sprightly mix of poultry and vegetables accompanied by crisp iceberg lettuce leaves for wrapping it all up. If ever iceberg had a purpose, this was it.

Both my vegetarian kids loved the eggplant with garlic sauce, a dish at once spunky and mellow, done with those pretty purple Japanese aubergines. Chicken with peanuts and hot peppers was a standout, suffused with that wonderful smokiness you're always hoping for in Chinese food. Moo shu chicken, an amalgam of chicken, eggs and vegetables rolled in thin pancakes slathered with hoisin sauce, was a fine representation of the genre. What surprised me most, though, was the steamed chicken and vegetables, a dish ordered from the "light cuisine" corner of the menu. It wasn't at all boring. Not only was the chicken pristine and tender, the vegetables bright and crisp, but the accompanying brown sauce was at once thin, spicy and satisfying - nothing like the gloppy stuff one usually gets.

We liked the spicy shredded beef with carrots and celery, but if truth be told, I was expecting it to be smoky, like the chicken with peanuts, and it wasn't. Vegetable chow fun, however, lived up to my anticipation - the broad noodles were slightly oily, the shredded vegetables crisp / tender, the end result something I was powerless to stop eating.

Dessert is the usual selection of ice cream, sherbet, lichee nuts. We chose to pass and instead received pineapple chunks with our fortune cookies. And lots of smiles from the solicitous staff. "You will fulfill the dreams of your youth," my fortune read.

No wonder the lady from the Islips keeps coming back.

You'll find good fortune at Wonton in the White Plains Mall

By Sheila Gerber

Before there were malls, there were streets. Streets with useful shops that repaired shoes, cleaned clothes and made duplicate keys. The White Plains Mall, far less glamorous than its Galleria neighbor, offers these humble yet necessary services plus a big extra — an excellent Chinese restaurant called Wonton.

We were impressed by the warm greeting, the soft music and the neatness of the simple decor. The polite and thoughtful service, such as replenishing our water glasses often and providing sharp cerrated knives, indicated that management was in control.

OUT TO LUNCH

These high standards extend into the kitchen. The soups are very good. Based on a clear, mild and fresh-tasting (rather than canned) chicken stock, the egg drop had flavorful body. Fine-cut scallion rings were added to the stock for the wonton soup, and the ravioli's Chinese cousins were stuffed with ginger-spiked ground pork (each soup $1). The hearty hot and sour soup ($1.25) was a well-balanced blend of spicy and pungent flavors, thick with vegetables and bean curd strips.

Fried appetizers, such as eggroll ($1) and scallion pancakes ($3.25), were tasty but if it's possible to be too greaseless, such was the case. Overly zealous draining of the frying oil made the appetizers somewhat tough and lacking in the unctuous rich mouthfeel that is an attribute of fried foods.

Attractively presented and generously portioned, Wonton's main dishes demonstrate the chef's high level of skill. Lake Tung-Ting shrimp ($8.50), served with carrots, mushrooms and baby corn, were delicate, juicy and full of flavor. The mildly spicy beef with orange flavor ($7.95) was cut in large tender chunks with curls of dried orange peel and hot peppers in the sauce. The accompanying bright-green broccoli was quick-cooked to perfect crispiness. Sesame chicken ($7.50), although deliciously coated with a liberal amount of sesame seeds and enhanced with a salty-sweet sauce, was also toughened by the frying process. Brown rice dotted with egg, meat and vegetable bits is served with all main dishes. Wonton also makes vegetarian and diet specialties.

Wonton is a pretty place for surprisingly good Chinese food, right near a useful place to get your shoes fixed — can you ask any more from a mall?
